Attorney Declares He Murdered Infant

By James L. Kilgallen
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

COURT ROOM, FLEMINGTON, N. J., Feb. 11—With every seat in the court room taken, Anthony M. Hauck, brilliant young prosecutor of Hunterdon County, launched the opening summation of the State today at the trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann for the murder of the Lindbergh baby.

Hauck, a tall, slim man of 34, took his position directly in front of the eight men and four women jurors as he began his summation.

The jury seemed fresh and rested. After the jury was polled, Egbert Rosecrans, of defense counsel, conferred with Justice Trenchard in a low voice. At the conclusion of the conference, Justice Trenchard asked an attendant to bring him two law volumes. After the books were brought in Rosecrans rose and said:

"Your Honor, the defense requests that the State open on points shortly."

"That is understood," replied Justice Trenchard.

At the outset, Hauck fired this verbal shot:

Miss Thomas Bride of George H. Wetherill

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 11—The marriage of Miss Betty Jane Thomas, ward of Dr. and Mrs. Herbert T. Crough, and George H. Wetherill, son of Mrs. Claude S. Wetherill, 58 East Court street, took place at high noon Saturday at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Crough, 79 Broad street. The Rev. William Reese Scott, rector of St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church, performed the ceremony in the presence of members of the two families.

The bride, who was given in marriage by Dr. Crough, was unattended. She wore a smart creation of brown taffeta, made with a basque bodice and long, full sleeves. The frock, a stunning model, was relieved by touches of soft cream lace at the V-neckline.

The bride's bouquet consisted of lilies-of-the-valley, yellow tea roses and bubblelia.

Dominating the living room, in which the ceremony took place, there was a profusion of tulips, daffodils and jonquils, all of which struck a Spring note, which was also carried out in the decoration scheme for the wedding breakfast.

Mrs. Wetherill, one of the most fete brides-to-be in the social set of the County Seat, has been a resident here since 1926. She attended Mohawk, N. Y., and Doylestown High Schools, and is a popular member of the younger set.

Immediately following a wedding breakfast, served at the bride's home, Mr. and Mrs. Wetherill left by motor for a trip through the South. They expect to be gone about five weeks and will visit Miami Beach and other cities in Florida on their wedding trip.

Upon returning from their honeymoon, the young couple will reside at the home of Mrs. Wetherill.

A charter member of the Doayapo Club, Mr. Wetherill is a graduate of Doylestown High School and Valley Forge Military Academy, of Wayne, and attended Temple University. At the present time he is associated with his brothers in business in Bristol.

Beloved "Anne of Green Gables" Is At The Grand

Romance, humor and charm are said to be combined in RKO-Radio's film version of L. M. Montgomery's famous novel, "Anne of Green Gables", coming to the Grand tonight and Tuesday. The picture, featuring sixteen-year-old Anne Shirley, concerns a red haired orphan heroine who is as dynamic and amusing as she is wistful and appealing. Taken into the home of a middle-aged bachelor and spinster brother and sister who had expected the orphanage to send them a boy, she wins their hearts and transforms their lives.

The story also traces her romance with a schoolboy beau. This starts with a spirited quarrel in which the girl breaks her slate over the boy's head. When their private feud is patched up, an old family quarrel menaces their ensuing romance. Tom Brown plays the boy of the youthful love affair.

Most of the humor of the story is said to center about the whimsical character of the heroine. The roles played by Brown, Helen Westley and O. P. Heggie also have their comedy highlights.

MISS EFFERSON IS WED TO BRISTOL TWP. MAN

Ceremony in Bristol Presbyterian Church; Rev. S. B. Knowlton Officiates

WILL RESIDE HERE

Bristol Presbyterian Church was the scene of a wedding Saturday afternoon at three o'clock, when Miss Bessie May Efferson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Efferson, 244 Cedar street, became the bride of George A. Winch, son of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Winch, Fergusonville.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. S. Brooks Knowlton, pastor of the church, in the presence of a large gathering. Mrs. Russell A. Johnson, Taylor street, sang "Because" and "I Love You Truly," accompanied at the organ by Mrs. Marburg D. Wearley. As the bridal party entered the church, Mrs. Weagley played Lohengrin's wedding march.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was beautifully gowned in white satin, fashioned on Princess lines, the long skirt ending in a train. The neckline was cut square in front and finished in the back with a standing lace collar. The long sleeves were lace trimmed. The tulle veiled edged with lace was fastened to a lace cap, tricorn shaped. She wore white satin slippers; and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and sweet peas.

Miss Elva Roberts, 238 Cedar street, was maid of honor, and wore a gown of deep blue crepe, fashioned on close-fitting lines. Her slippers and turban of crepe were the tone of her gown, and she carried an arm spray of pink sweet peas and snapdragons. The bridesmaids were the Misses Lorene and Marjorie Barkley, Montclair, N. J.

CORONER'S JURY HOLDS FIVE MEN FOR WEISS' DEATH

Legenza and Wiley Named As The Actual Executioners

WAS MERE FORMALITY

Detective Russo and Coroner
Sweeney Were The Only Witnesses

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 11—Several hours after the full story of the murder of William (Big Nose) Weiss had been told for the first time in public, Friday, by one member of the now extinct Mais-Legenza gang at the office of Justice of the Peace W. Carlile Hobensack, an inquest was conducted in the Weiss death by Dr. John J. Sweeney, Bucks county coroner.

The inquest was a mere formality, for Robert Eckart, one of the six held Friday in the murder charge, had told it all at the hearing in the morning in hope to save himself from the electric chair, where the County of Bucks and Commonwealth of Pennsylvania hope to send him.

None of the defendants—Wiley, Farrell, Eckart, Coffey, Seibel or Mrs. Wilkinson—were present at the inquest held in the same room where the story of the brutal kidnapping and murder was related several hours before.

Bucks County Detective Antonio Russo, of Bristol, prosecutor in the cases, was the only witness besides Coroner Sweeney himself, who performed the autopsy on Weiss at the George R. Leatter morgue, Doylestown, the same day that Weiss' body was lifted out of the cold waters of the Nesheamy Creek at Croydon.

Members of the Coroner's jury who heard County Detective Russo testify that Weiss' body had been identified on the creek bank at Croydon by Philadelphia police and detectives who knew him, and by one of his former pals, included Nicholas F. Power, Russell B. Gulick, Charles Hart, Raymond Rutherford, Robert Flack and Abe Zinn, all of Doylestown.

It took the jury but three minutes to return their verdict, which the foreman, Nick Power, read as follows:

"William Weiss came to his death as a result of gunshot wounds received at the hands of Francis Wiley, Martin Farrell, Walter Legenza, Robert Mais, Robert James Eckart and other persons to this inquest now unnamed. We recommend that Francis Wiley, Martin Farrell and Robert James Eckart be held for the next term of Court of Oyer and Terminer on a charge of murder."

Dr. Sweeney testified that Weiss was shot twice by his killers, whom Eckart named at the hearing as Legenza, electrocuted a week ago today in Richmond, and Wiley, who was returned to the "Pen" after being held by Justice Hobensack on the murder charge.

This week the Grand Jury of Bucks County for the February term will be asked to indict the six defendants held yesterday. It is likely that the first trial, probably that of Wiley, will get started the week of February 25.

JUDGE TAKES WATCH IN LIEU OF AUTO FINE

Gives James Guy His Time-piece When Caught Without Operator's Card

ANOTHER IS ARRESTED

Judge James Guy last evening took a gold watch and chain in lieu of $10 fine and cost which he imposed upon William A. Kline, colored, 127 Wood street.

Kline was arrested by State Highway Patrolman C. W. Reitz. Kline was caught operating a motor vehicle in Bristol Township without an operator's license.

Kline did not have the money to pay his fine so deposited his gold watch and chain as security. He said that he would redeem it some time today.

Following an automobile collision near South Langhorne yesterday, John Gilstrap, 38 years old, of New York, was arrested on a charge of drunken driving.

According to Highway Patrolman Reitz his machine sideswiped another operated by Harry Goldberg, of Newark, traveling in the opposite direction. Neither autoist was injured.

Gilstrap was sent to the Doylestown jail in default of $500 bail by Justice of the Peace Daniel Krouse.

MEET TO KNIT

Miss Elizabeth Nelson, Pine street, was hostess Saturday evening to a group of knitters at her home. A pleasant evening was enjoyed and refreshments were served to: the Misses Regina Peters, Elizabeth Mulligan, Catherine Ferry, Dolores Dunn, Dorothy Curran and Eileen Wiltshire.

A classified ad will sell that piece of furniture that is no longer needed.

SEIZE RUM PLANT IN HISTORIC FARM HOUSE

Moonshiners Escape Through Tunnel Used by Revolutionary Soldiers

U. S. AGENTS STAGE RAID

EDDINGTON, Feb. 11—A man giving the name of Adolph Stopyra, 18, was held in $500 bail for a further hearing tomorrow by U. S. Commissioner Wacker.

Stopyra was questioned in connection with a raid on a farm house at Oakford and Mechanicsville roads, early yesterday.

Stopyra lives a short distance from the house raided with his widowed mother.

Federal agents closed in on the Bucks county farmhouse, rich in legends of the Revolutionary period, yesterday at dawn and seized the largest illicit still found in this area since repeal.

The still was in full operation, but the moonshiners escaped through an underground passage which, tradition says, was used by soldiers and spies of the Colonial Army. They left behind their coats and lunches in their haste.

The farmhouse is at Oakford and Mechanicsville roads, near here. It is of stone construction and reputed to be about 200 years old.

An elaborate alarm system had been installed in the place and apparently was operated electrically by a lookout stationed in an automobile parked about 250 yards from the house. When agents entered the house they found red lights blinking a warning.

Raiders said the still had a capacity of 2500 gallons and that they found several hundred gallons of its product on the premises. Most of the output of the plant, they believe, was marketed through Philadelphia bootleggers.

The agents were puzzled at first at finding the house empty and it was not until they visited the basement that they discovered the subterranean passage which led to a patch of woods about 40 yards from the house.

Arrange To Raise Funds For The Shepherds' Home

The red team of Shepherds Delight Lodge, No. 1, Shepherds of Bethlehem, met at the home of the chairman of the committee, Mrs. William Harding, 905 Garden street, Thursday evening, to discuss means of raising money for the Shepherds' Home in Haddonfield.

A social club was formed which will meet the first and third Wednesdays of each month at which time the public is invited to join them. A silver offering will be taken and refreshments will be served; games such as radio, cards, etc., will be played. The first social of the club will be held at 905 Garden street on February 20th.

The officers are: President, Mrs. William Ennis; treasurer, Mrs. Arthur Britton; secretary, Miss Edith Allen. Plans were made for a rummage sale in the near future. Refreshments followed the meeting.

Those present were: Mrs. Edith Ratcliffe, Mrs. William Ennis, Mrs. Arthur Britton, Mr. and Mrs. William Walton, Miss Edith Allen, Henry Streeter, Mrs. William Harding.

NO YOUTH MOVEMENT IN WORLD COMPARABLE TO "SCOUTING," STATES JUDGE KELLER AT THE COUNTY COURT OF HONOR; EAGLE SCOUTS ARE KNIGHTED

Applicants Include: Burtis Tomlinson, Morrisville; Frank Tarantino, Bertram Wakely, Quakertown; Samuel Cordasco, Trevoise; Henry Ahlum, Richlandtown; George Miles, Gerald Rosenberger, Quakertown

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 11—"There is no youth movement throughout the world comparable to 'Scouting.' It is unlike the Youth Movements, in some of the foreign countries, which are politically minded, and, as such, contribute to the confusion of modern Europe," said Judge Hiram H. Keller, chairman of the Court of Honor Committee of the Bucks County Council, yesterday, in the county court room, as he opened the 1935 County Court of Honor.

"For twenty-five years, the Boy Scouts of America have served this nation well, and as they have increased in numbers, so has the scope, influence, and usefulness of their activities increased. It admits no argument that Scouting has more than justified its right to continue existence, and extension," continued the Judge. "When we reflect and consider that 539 of our citizens are devoting a good portion of their time, without compensation, to this work in leading boys to a life of clean living with an objective of worthy citizenship and strong character, by means of a program which appeals to the boys under their charge, then there can be no question as to the value of Scouting as a Citizenship Training and Character Building Movement, and that it demands our continuous and wholehearted support."

"In this connection, may I take this opportunity to publicly express the thanks and appreciation of the County Council to the many contributors to this movement throughout the county for their splendid response to our appeal for financial assistance, last fall. I know that in a number of instances it meant a real sacrifice. I also want to thank the members of the committees who volunteered their services in the campaign. The contributions are going to make possible the continuing of the Scouting Program for another year."

"Doc" Strathie, Newtown, expressed the feeling of the hundreds of people who crowded the Court Room, "Where are we going to put them next year?" The court room was more than packed; it was jammed. Hundreds of Boy Scouts were moved from the seats in the audience down to sitting on the floor in front of the Judge's Bench but this did not relieve the aisles and corridor; more people came in. It was the largest crowd that has been in the Court Room at one time, and many were turned away. One spectator estimated the audience as being over 1100. Hundreds of cars crowded the parking space around the court house, and nearby streets. Every community in the county was represented. The court room was beautifully decorated with palms and snap dragons through the co-operation of a Doylestown greenhouse.

The "knighting" of the Eagle Scout applicants, assistant scoutmaster Burtis Tomlinson, Morrisville No. 1; Frank Tarantino and Bertram Wakely, Quakertown No. 1; assistant scoutmaster Samuel Cordasco, Trevoise; cubmaster Henry Ahlum, Richlandtown; and George Miles and Gerald Rosenberger, Quakertown No. 2; into Eagle Scout rank by the King Arthur ceremony, was the most impressive award of the afternoon program.

The castle scene was a work of art by Scoutmaster Gilbert Carlin of Chalfont, Scouts from Doylestown No. 2 and Quakertown No. 2 constructed the fixtures. Eagle Scoutmaster O. Kenneth Fretz made an exceptional portrayal of King Arthur with a supporting cast of Merlin (Gerald Biehn), Page (William Muehauzer), Herald (Kenneth Gerhart), and the King's Guard (Clyde Badman, Stuart Badman, Willard Fly, Willard Funk, Lawrence Nadig, Ralph Nicholas, Francis Ritter, and William Schissler. The lighting effects by Scoutmaster George E. Dornier of Doylestown No. 2 added to the charm of the setting. Mrs. Katherine Fretz was helpful with the dialogue. The Rover Crew of Chalfont arranged the stage. The spotlight was operated by visiting Neighborhood Commissioner Walter V. Rutherford, Philadelphia.

Judge Calvin S. Boyer presented Eagle Scout Palms to a number of Eagle Scouts earning additional achievements. Judge Boyer said, "It is always possible to secure a number to enter a race but there are generally only a few who will see it through. The determination, and energy of you boys is worthy of special mention. Keep up your present initiative, and life will offer you opportunities. I am delighted to know your award involves your having proven that you have been rendering service to others over a period of the past months."

President Thomas Ross, Esq., Doylestown, spoke of the co-operation the Scout must receive from his home if he is going to make progress in Scouting. Mr. Ross said, "The home, and its support are very important to the progress of the Scout. Both must co-operate with the Scout Leader. The Scouts before me are deserving of their award, and indicate their having received the co-operation of their homes," added President Ross, as he assisted the fathers of Scouts Kenneth Fluck, and Ralph Underkoffer of Quakertown No. 1 in placing the Merit Badge Sash Award for fifteen merit badges on the shoulders of their sons. All of the audience gave a spontaneous greeting to President Ross as he concluded his remarks. A salute was given to him for his splendid leadership of the Council.

Perkasie No. 1, the 1934 County Championship Scoutcraft Troop, under the leadership of Scoutmaster Clarence Souder, assisted by neighborhood commissioner Clayton F. Prichard, gave an impressive presentation of the Scout Laws "coming from" the audience to the investiture setting of service. Commodore Thomas B. Stockham of Morrisville, led the audience in the recommitment of their Scout Oath, and concluded the ceremony by stating: "The Scout Oath brings out citizenship. We must look to our youth to solve our problems. In Scouting, we have the Eagle soaring to spiritual heights, as the goal of our ambition. May we do our best for God, and our Country."

The invocation by Rev. Samuel Allen Jackson, New Hope, and the benediction by Rev. Howard Obold, Perkasie, made everyone present deeply conscious of their responsibility to God, and their twelfth Scout law obligation of "A Scout is Reverent". F. Lloyd Harr, Perkasie, represented the American Legion Ninth District by leading in the Pledge of Allegiance.

County Boy Scout Commissioner William Burgess, Jr., Morrisville, said while presenting the Veteran Badges: "A veteran is one who serves over a period of years. I urge you to more five year milestones of veteran service for Scouting". Second Class badges were given out by vice-chairman Walter W. Pitzonka, Bristol, who said, "This is your first step in Scouting advanced awards, and I can see that each of you has striven hard to obtain this goal." The award of First Class badges by District Vice-Chairman Thomas E. Coe, Langhorne, assisted by district commissioner Harold D. R. Crumrine, included the remarks by

High School Stamp Club To Be Guests of Bristol Club

The Bristol Stamp Club will hold a meeting and exhibit this evening in the Bristol Presbyterian Church, and will have as guests the members of the Stamp Club of the Bristol High School.

The President, Howard Lovett, will talk to the gathering on the issue of 1909.

The meeting is planned for a most interesting and instructive one, and all members are urged to attend.

Announcement is Made of Wedding of Lt. Pursell

Announcement has been made of the wedding of Miss Eleanor Taylor, daughter of Mrs. Carlton Brennan Taylor, Collingswood, N. J., to Lieut. William Updyke Pursell, Fort Devens, Mass., and grandson of William S. Updyke, of this place. Lieut. Pursell is well known here, being the son of John Pursell, New Hope, and the late Jenny Updyke Pursell, of Bristol. The ceremony occurred February 8th, at Albany, N. Y.

The bride is a graduate of Collingswood High School. She is also a graduate nurse, having received her training at the Abington Memorial Hospital. She has been supervising nurse at the Frankford Hospital for several years.

Lieut. Pursell was graduated from New Hope High School and Pennsylvania State College, where afterwards he held the position of Colonel of Reserve Officers' Training Corps (at Penn State College). This is the highest title given by the college.

Recently he has been advanced to first lieutenant and now holds the position of commissary officer for 31 civilian conservation corps camps throughout the New England states.

YEAR OF THE PINK SLIP

No one, so far as we know, goes about asking his friends and acquaintances or his business associates the extent of their wage earnings for a given period. No one asks and, except when a group of wage-earners may publicly complain about it, no one tells what he earns. The information is, or was, the private possession of the individual or the business concern directly affected; few shared, and none had to share, it with his neighbor.

But no longer is this so: this is 1935, the Year of the Pink Slip. The pink slip that comes with every tax blank this year is the gift particularly of Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin, who insisted upon an amendment to the revenue act last year providing for publicity for all income tax returns. The slip, which every taxpayer must fill out, unless he is willing to let the government do it for him at a cost of $5, provides space for the name and address and signature of the maker of the return, a statement of his total gross income, total deductions, net income, total credits against net income for purposes of normal tax, and the tax payable.

A subsection of the law, cited on the slips, says that: "Such agreements or copies thereof shall as soon as practicable be made available to public examination and inspection in such manner as the commissioner (of internal revenue) with the approval of the secretary may determine, in the office of the collector with which they are filed, for a period of not less than three years from the date they are required to be filed."

Obviously it's a grand chance for snoopers who want to find out how much their neighbors make, and how many people they are supporting. To pry into such things is like looking at private correspondence, but it is perfectly legal in this, the year of the Pink Slip. The regulation also offers opportunities for business houses to learn whether their competitors are making money, and how much. Those so inclined can get a line on whether it is going to be worth while to try to squeeze the other fellow out of business. And employees will be able to learn the state of the boss's business and whether he is telling the truth when he says he is just getting by, and cannot raise wages.

We see by the publicity that some of the distillers think well of their whisky.

A progressive railroad is known by the antiquated equipment it doesn't keep.

For some, automobile accidents come under the head of higher education.

An ocean is that large, wet, restless expanse, with a jingo on either side.

Two operators of a tax racket have been arrested in Cleveland. The charge, we believe, is impersonating a public official.

The Federal Government's plan to teach contractors how to build houses probably is commendable, but there are a great many more persons who ought to be taught how to live in them.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

In my search for material for "Echoes of the Past" I came across a copy of The Bucks County Gazette, a weekly newspaper established in Bristol by the late Jesse O. Thomas. The first number of Volume I of this weekly messenger was issued from the office, corner of Radcliffe and Walnut streets, and the subscription was $2 per year. This issue is dated August 14, 1873.

In a perusal of this first issue of The Gazette I find a number of interesting things. For instance, W. M. Taylor Potts, M. D., physician and surgeon, whose office was at 61 Bath street, advertised. Physicians nowadays consider it unethical to advertise in newspapers. Another advertisement in this issue was for the Bristol Boarding School for Girls. This school was conducted by S. H. Peirce & Sisters. The school was established in 1862, and was located along the Delaware River. There was admitted a limited number of boarders and according to the advertisement the care, both mental and physical, was that of a well regulated family.

C. C. Douglass was advertising something new—Rickard's corn grater, for grating green corn. Prospective purchasers were invited to call and see it at the Douglass place of business, 61 Mill street.

The burgess and council of Bristol, on July 14th, 1873, finally adopted an ordinance framed for the purpose of inducing manufacturers to accept the unsurpassed advantages of Bristol. The inducement offered by the borough ordinance was exemption from borough tax for a period of 10 years from the date of the passage of the ordinance of any manufactory "that may be hereafter erected within the borough limits."

The Young Men's Christian Association held its regular Monday evening meeting in Washington Hall, Radcliffe and Walnut streets, and was presided over by Thomas Hughes, who conducted the exercises. Those attending were invited to express their views on the subject, whether the religious growth of Bristol had kept pace with its material growth.

William Kinsey stated that in the year 1820 the only denominations worshipping here were the Episcopalians, Methodists and Friends. The membership of the Episcopal Church was about 70 and of the Methodist Church about 25. The first Sabbath School was inaugurated by two Friends—the Misses Buckley—who taught poor children to read. The population of the town then was 1500. The seating capacity of the churches was not more than 600. Mr. Kinsey contrasted the churches of that day with the large churches of the present, having a seating capacity of nearly 3,000, and flourishing Sabbath Schools attached to each. He claimed that the churches would comfortably seat 90 per cent of the entire population, and challenged comparison with other communities. Rev. William S. Perkins inclined to the negative of the question, as also did Alexander Ralph, who thought that vice had increased, and cited the existence of 28 rum shops in confirmation of his position. Remarks were made at this meeting by E. G. Harrison and the Rev. Mr. Brinklow, of Hulmeville.

A petition was placed in circulation throughout the borough requesting the burgess and council to take measures to have the railroad company substitute the ringing of the engine bell on all trains while within the borough limits for the fearful shriek of the steam-whistle then in use, and which daily endangered the lives of those driving within the vicinity of the railroad, as well as disturbed the peaceful dreams of the residents along the line.

An appropriation of $1250 was made to borough council for grading Wood and Pond streets and Jefferson avenue.

A number of houses had just been completed by the contractors of that day. Edward Lawrence had finished the brick house on the northwest corner of Radcliffe and Penn streets for Morton A. Walmesley, probable value of house and lot, $19,000. On the north corner of Jefferson avenue and Pond street, J. W. Martin finished a new house, with tenant house, carriage house and stable attached, for Joshua Peirce, probable cost of house and grounds, $20,000. On the east corner of Jefferson avenue and Pond street, C. T. Wollard finished a new house for Joshua Peirce, probable cost of house and ground, $15,000. At Radcliffe and Washington streets, Edward Lawrence finished a new house for George LaRue, probable cost of house and grounds, $6,000. At Washington avenue and Cedar street, John Baker finished a new house for himself, house and grounds costing $2800. On Dorrance street between Wood and Pond streets, C. T. Wollard finished two houses for James Bruden, cost of houses, $2200 each.

A thriving carriage and wagon industry was located in Newportville, and was conducted by W. W. Rose. Mr. Rose advertised that he had a heavy stock of carriages, consisting of all the latest New York patterns, shooflies, track sulkies, trotting wagons, sun-shades, falling-tops, Germantowns and jagger wagons.

HEATING HINTS

.. by John Barclay

ONE of the most common complaints voiced by home-owners is to the effect that the draft is so poor that the fire will not stay in. Usually this condition can be remedied by the location of the cause . . . and the cause nearly always lies in one of the five following places:

1.—A leaking chimney flue; this is sometimes caused by rust or careless joining of the flue pipe sections;

2.—Poor chimney construction; many times we find a chimney that is so narrow that it is practically impossible to get sufficient draft.

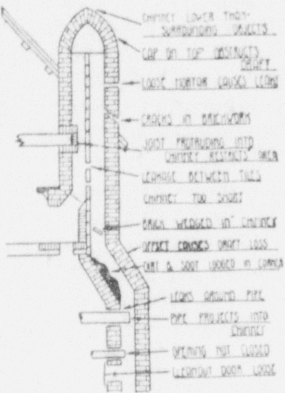

Again we often find a decorative arch across the top of the chimney opening on the roof. This may be pleasing from a scenic viewpoint, but it prevents your fire from getting the proper draft (see illustration showing fourteen defects that may be found in chimneys).

3.—Fly ash (carbon) accumulation in the gas passages; this can be eliminated by having the gas passages, as well as the entire furnace, thoroughly vacuum-cleaned at regular intervals . . . at least once a year.

4.—The pipe projecting into chimney, beyond the wall surface; the flue pipe should be placed flush with the inside of the wall nearest the chimney opening;

5.—Turn damper rusted shut; naturally the turn damper in your flue pipe should be movable, so that when you turn the handle the disc inside the pipe will move.

If you have difficulty in locating the cause of insufficient draft, consult an expert.

"THE LADY DANCES" by MARGE STANLEY

CHAPTER XXIX

"Mark," said Vanya, again stopping, "if you really believed what I've told you, you couldn't—you simply couldn't—have acted as you have toward me! You're not just naturally cruel; you're not a sadist—or you wouldn't have rescued that crawling little reptile just now."

"Vanya, I have been kinder—as gentle as I could be! You know it!"

"Kind—gentle! Yes, if you mean not beating me, or if you mean that—that disgusting offer of charity! Is that what you mean? Is that your conception of kindness? Because it isn't mine!"

"Dear," said Mark, "don't let's work into one of those bitter quarrels of ours. I tell you I believe your story; I'm convinced that you told me the truth."

"But not the whole truth, I suppose! That's what you're trying to imply, isn't it? You mean I've left out—details—of my life in Canton or Singapore, or here. Don't you? Don't you?"

"Honey, I haven't asked you—"

"No, you haven't! But you wanted to know how I paid for my passage to San Francisco! You'd have doubted my story about Bill Torkas if it weren't for Loring—your dear, worthless friend Loring! And then—"

"—She paused, almost choking with indignation.

"Yes! Then! Then what?" bristled Mark. His own none too easy temper was beginning to raise its head.

"Then—then you had the unspeakable audacity to throw up to me the fact that I accepted your damnable proposal! And to top it all off—to add the last sneer, the final insult—you tell me casually that you made me the proposition as a test! That you'd have taken me anyway!"

"And so I did make it! So I would have! I wanted you to refuse me!"

Vanya was crying now; tears rolled from her eyes down her brown cheeks, despite the desperate blinking of her eyes to withhold them. It was the first time Mark had seen her really weep; she was giving way unrestrainedly to her anger and unhappiness, and even through his own anger a trace of pity awakened.

"Vanya!" he cried. "Listen a moment! It's all true, what you're saying. I've been an utter cad. But can't you see why? Can't you understand my reasons? You did accept the bargain! Cou! I tell my mother or my sister—"

"Mother and sister!" stormed the girl. "I had a mother and a father and a brother—and any of them would have shot you to death, eagerly and gladly, for much less than you've done to me! And after all this, you tricked me into admitting I loved you! I wish—"

Her voice broke; she choked back a sob, while Mark stared speechless at her.

"Why don't you withdraw your offer?" she sobbed. "Your test worked! You found out what you wanted to know! Does a promise made to a woman like me bind a gentleman?"

REVULSION

"Loring," said Mark, staring at the empty bay, "would you like to go back to England?"

"About as much as I'd like to walk right into Paradise—and it's just as impossible." The beachcomber twisted his brown toes in the moonlight.

"I could help."

"So you could, if I were willing; which I'm not. I have my reasons."

"They must be strong ones to keep you here."

"Maybe I'm wanted for murder," observed Loring cheerfully.

"Then you wouldn't be here. Torkas's British," Mark paused, then continued, "I've a mind to get in touch with your family. Perhaps they'll do something if you won't!"

"Go ahead," said the beachcomber complacently. "You'll be chagrined to learn that Loring isn't my name, and that Abbeycroft doesn't exist."

"You're determined on utter ruin!" Mark exclaimed in exasperation.

"Would you take money, as a sort of parting gift? Or I could send a few dollars each month."

"Great idea," said Loring. "On a few American dollars I could soon drink myself to death."

"In other words, you won't take help."

"You caught my subtle meaning. But I appreciate your intentions; I'm really grateful." He glanced at the hotel. "Here's your boy."

"My boy? Oh, the native I sent to Nuku for the prau." Mark turned to the young native glistening brown in the moonlight. "My boat come?" he asked.

"Boat come tomorrow," confirmed the lad. "Big pearl boat come, too."

"A ship!" said Loring in surprise.

"That's a miracle—three ships in as many weeks during the dry months. Shemell grow affluent, the dog! What name?"

which they had watched the hatching of the turtles. There he sat with his legs hanging over the edge of the little cliff, staring down at the still ruffled sand whence the newborn amphibians had emerged.

The wind would smooth it out eventually, of course, but as yet the small mounds and hollows where the turtles had struggled to the surface were visible as a reminder. The turtles had met their problems, Mark thought, with a directness and a certainty that should give an example to him. They wasted no efforts in futile speculation as to which way lay the sea; they were born and knew it at once.

Mark was, he thought, like the little turtle who had strayed into the sand-pit. He could not change

"I had a mother and a father and a brother—and any of them would have shot you to death gladly for much less than you've done to me!"

"Ker-dee," responded the native. "The Kermadee," interpreted the beachcomber. "Captain Horsten, as ugly a brute as you'll find under the equator."

"He'd do without Vanya," said Mark grimly, fishing among the change in his pocket and tossing the boy a silver dollar.

The native caught it and departed. Mark called a good-night to Loring and wandered after him, noting the yellow oil-light glowing in Vanya's window. It had been hours since he'd seen her, not since their argument of the morning.

He felt no desire for renewed argument. He walked slowly toward the point, thinking of the problems that had harassed him ever since his departure from San Francisco. He had set out with high hopes of adventurous events and a romantic life; yet ever since that first day, his wanderings had been miserably tangled in the career of the black-haired Russian girl whom he had seen on the dock and met in the steerage.

Vanya! Loring, shrewd and clever and satiric, had told him that he was in love with her; well, he was. He might as well admit the fact to himself. He didn't want to be; the admission was reluctant, unpleasant, and yet—in another way he was glad to face it. Not that it simplified his problem to name the emotion love, rather than calling it infatuation or obsession; if anything, it complicated the mess. And Vanya's reciprocal emotion—what did even that count against the bald fact that she had accepted his infamous offer?

Mark stared at the lighted square of window, and turned away toward the deserted point. He picked his way out on the coral spit, and paused as he reached the spot from direction, but struggled helplessly against the sandy walls of his life's training. Loring had different ideals, different standards; no matter—Mark realized that it was too late to change his own.

He sat perhaps half an hour on the shelf of the reef. The moon, rising a little later each night, and its silver luminosity cast a kind of magic beauty over the island. Mark almost regretted departing on the morrow; the place had a haunting loveliness by moonlight.

Then another sort of loveliness awoke in his consciousness. He thought of Vanya, of her features pale with anger, or smiling one of her rare, grave smiles, or—as he seen her once—laughing. And he began to realize that the beauty in the scene of silver moonlight was not entirely due to the charm of the tropical island; part of it, at least, was bound up with the presence on that island of the dark-haired girl he had followed so tenaciously and so far. Tongatabu, lacking Vanya's presence, would have seemed no more beautiful than the islands of the Carolines, or Fiji, or Samoa, or a dozen others he had visited and left. It was not the island at all, he concluded; it was Vanya—Vanya, who half-loved, half-hated him, and whom he half-despised and half-worshipped.

Back in the clearing, he could still see the lighted rectangle of her window in the Diver's Helmet. Suddenly he wanted to see her, to talk to her, to be gentle and kind, and to forget the bitterness that ever lay between them. He rose abruptly, and made his way back along the reef to the clearing, and into the oil-lit bar-room.

BEHIND THE SCENES AT HARRISBURG

HARRISBURG, Feb. 11—Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti revealed as two-fold the main objectives of the Democratic movement for radical revision of the State Constitution when he addressed the Senate Committee now holding hearings on that subject.

Margiotti gave the Democratic reasons as a desire to be able to push through the Legislature over-night any bill that might be labelled an "emergency" measure, and to extend the borrowing capacity of the State without appeal to the people.

Senator G. Mason Owlett, Republican, as chairman of the committee, asked Margiotti if he didn't think it wise to maintain safeguards against too hasty action on the part of the Legislature. Owlett thought it wrong to empower the lawmakers to jam through all manner of legislation without giving the people back home opportunity to express opinion. Margiotti continued to hold out for the privilege of over-night action.

Owlett also asked Margiotti if he didn't think Penna. would now be overburdened with debt if the Legislature had not been restrained by the Constitution, and compelled to go on a "pay-as-you-go" basis. Margiotti admitted that some limit should be provided, but thought borrowing power should be greatly enlarged. He said the State could not have provided for its needy under the present arrangement without the aid of the federal government.

To which Senator Homsher, Republican, responded that if the federal government had given the relief funds to Penna. in proportion to the amount of taxes it collects from Pennsylvania there would now be plenty of money with which to provide for Penna's unemployed. Margiotti made no reply to this.

Republican Senators made it clear that Republicans are not opposed to changing the Constitution, but that they believe such an important undertaking should not be authorized until the people themselves have been permitted to say whether or not they desire revision, pointing out that on two previous occasions the voters had decided against constitutional changes despite the fact that the Legislature favored revision.

Meantime, Chairman Morton Witkin, of the Republican Steering Committee, had presented a bill in the House providing for a referendum at the municipal primaries in September and, if approved, the election of delegates by party nominations at the regular November elections. The convention would be held in December and would be submitted to the people in April, becoming effective if approved, on June 1st, 1936. The Witkin bill would give the people an opportunity to vote on the Constitution by section, rejecting what they regarded as bad and approving the good. This opportunity for freedom of action is opposed by the Democrats, who want the new Constitution swallowed whole or rejected as a whole.

Slowly but surely sentiment over the State is crystallizing in favor of the Republican plan of going slow. Dr. Philip David Bookstaber, chairman of the Pennsylvania State Civil Liberties Committee, has issued a statement in which he says he sees peril in "hurrying through," and requesting hearings in both House and Senate. He sees danger in other directions, also, warning against "violation of the principle of separation of Church and State," adding that "a sectarian invasion of our public school system" should not be allowed. Dr. Bookstaber favors selection of delegates by senatorial districts, as giving the people a better opportunity for personal knowledge of the qualifications of the candidates for delegate. The Democrats favor congressional districts.

The Jr. O. U. A. M. has sent the Legislature a resolution "protesting the holding of a convention to revise the Constitution," and urging its members throughout the State to register their disapproval. Active opposition to the proposed convention is also registered by the Constitution Defence League, which claims the support of many patriotic organizations.

The Republican members will continue to oppose any such changes as will load the State with untold millions of debt for the purpose of raising money with which to run the government. They are not opposed to a reasonable increase, however.

FALLSINGTON

Principal Andrew J. Chamberlin, Howard Satterthwaite, Walter De Lashmutt and Walter Hazard, who attended the annual convention of the State School Directors' Association at Harrisburg, were the guests at a reception given by Governor and Mrs. Earle.

Mrs. William Tigar entertained her card club at her home recently. The guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Fowler, Miss Mabel Walker, Mrs. John Drews, Mr. and Mrs. John Haldeman, Mrs. Frank Dougherty, Miss Mary Hergert, Miss Kathryn Hergert, Francis McNabb, Joseph Spillatore and Clarence Goslin. Miss Mary Hergert will be hostess to the club, February 23rd.

Mrs. Gertrude Deck, Trenton, N. J., is visiting Mrs. William Tigar.

Mrs. Florence Hall, Philadelphia, is visiting her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Stradling.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lucas entertained on Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Robert White and Mrs. George Risga, Penns Manor.

How much would you pay for a dollar bill?

THIS IS A TRUE STORY: It started with a half-serious wager, and it teaches a lesson.

Two business men were visiting a famous resort. One offered to bet the other that he couldn't sell real dollar bills for 50c apiece. The other accepted the challenge and went to work.

"How do you do," he said to a passing stranger. "Will you give me 50c for this dollar bill?" The stranger paid no attention.

The salesman tried again, and again. But nobody bought—and finally he had to admit that he'd lost his bet.

All of which suggests that people like to know who the seller is before they buy. You can trust the merchants who advertise their products in this newspaper. The advertisements offer useful, dependable information about things you need and want. Read and heed the advertisements carefully and you will reap savings and satisfaction.

CHEESE ADDS FLAVOR AND LIKEWISE FOOD TO THE FAMILY MEAL

By Rhondena A. Armstrong
(Home Economics Representative)

American Cheddar cheese, Cheddar cheese, or plain American cheese, as it is commonly known, is a concentrated food. It makes a good main dish by itself or it can be used to add flavor and food value to any other part of the meal, in soup, meat, vegetables, salad, or dessert.

American Cheddar is made of whole milk; cottage cheese, or skimmed milk. Both are rich in protein for building muscles, phosphorus and lime for strong bones and teeth, and vitamin A to help protect against colds and infections.

Cheese fondue, made with a cup of cheese, a cup of milk, and a cup of bread crumbs plus two eggs, can be served as an inexpensive main dish for the family dinner. Cheese crackers, made by grating cheese on crackers and toasting them under the oven flame, can be used with vegetable or fruit salads for the Sunday supper. Tomato rarebit, Welsh rarebit, cheese with tomatoes and rice, cheese soufflé, cheese with macaroni and tomatoes, cheese fondue, cheese scalloped with cabbage and spaghetti, cheese in rice croquettes, cheese sliced or made into a spread for sandwiches, cheese with anything almost, will add both to the flavor and food value of the meal.

When eaten at a rational pace, the meal and thoroughly chewed, cheese is usually well digested but the method of cooking the cheese has much to do with its digestibility. Grate or flake or shave the cheese, or cut it into small pieces, and distribute these through the other ingredients of the cheese dish, the bread crumbs, the spaghetti, the vegetable, as the case may be, and cook at a very moderate temperature. Then the cheese has no chance to form the leathery mass which is so slow to digest.

PROMINENT WOMAN FROM ARGENTINA IS A VISITOR IN PARIS

By Nadia de Beaud
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

PARIS—(INS)—The American Women's Club had an interesting visitor in the person of Mrs. Owen Street Payne, of Buenos Aires. She is president of the Patriotic Society of American Women in Argentina, and has been visiting in London and in Paris as house guest of Mrs. Robert E. Eakin, herself a most active member of the club. A special tea was given at which Mrs. Payne spoke.

Mrs. Frederic Shearer presided, looking very smart in a black crepe gown with an elbow length cape of kolinsky. Mrs. Eakin was in brown, whereas the speaker was also in black with a bright green plisse jabot at the neck.

Among others present was Mrs. Frank Armstrong, the well known artist, whose etchings of Paris are as well known in America as here. Like an old Parisian, she also wore black with a lawn collar and a simple felt hat with a brim turned up on one side.

Mrs. Payne will return to London before sailing for Buenos Aires, where her husband is president of the branch of the Guaranty Trust Co.

STATE NEWS

WASHINGTON—(INS)—Rated among the first five states in number of licensed aircraft and pilots, Pennsylvania leads the nation with the greatest number of commercial airports, according to latest statistics of the Bureau of Air Commerce, Department of Commerce.

Seventy of Pennsylvania's 116 airports and landing fields are commercial airports, more than either California or Texas, each of which surpasses the Keystone state in the total number of landing areas.

The figures as of January 1, 1935, give Pennsylvania 10 municipal airports, 70 commercial, 12 intermediate landing fields, 13 auxiliary fields, two army airdromes, and one navy air station. Forty of the 116 fields are lighted for night operations. Only 17 states have fewer municipal airports than Pennsylvania.

Pennsylvania, with 416, stands fourth in number of licensed aircraft, and fifth, with 732, in number of licensed pilots. These represent slight decreases from 1934, apparent from the total figures for the country.

WILLIAMSPORT—(INS)—Three new public recreational parks are being constructed by CCC workers at Masten, Ravensburg, and Upper Pine Bottom in state forests near this city.

William Rotunno, Cape May, N. J., has been making a lengthy stay with Mrs. Rachel Rotunno and family, Lincoln avenue.

LANGHORNE QUINTET DEFEATS BENSALEM

BENSALEM, Feb. 11.—On Friday evening the Langhorne quintet downed the Bensalem five by a score of 37 to 26 in a very exciting game.

Ed. Malone led the Bensalem scorers with five field goals and one foul with Oscar Schreiber second with three field goals and a foul. Vitale managed to outdo his team-mate, Ross, by one point, when he sank a foul goal to bring his total to 11.

Langhorne rolled up a 16-5 lead in the first quarter, but in the second quarter Bensalem rallied and shortened the lead to 18-13. The second half, Langhorne increased the lead, and Bensalem was unable to overtake them.

In the preliminary game the Bensalem J. V.'s defeated the Langhorne J. V.'s, 30-14. Price led the Bensalem scorers with 8 points, while J. McGrath led the Langhorne scorers with five points.

On Monday evening Bensalem will encounter the Bristol teams on Bensalem floor. This is the game postponed from January 25th. There will be wrestling between the halves.

No Youth Movement in World Comparable to "Scouting," Says Judge Keller

Mr. Keller said, "This is our twenty-fifth birthday. We must never forget Scouting was founded to make men."

Dr. A. J. Strathie, chairman of the county educational committee, Newtown, assisted by Neighborhood Commissioner Clarence F. Hawk, Doylestown emphasized the work of his committee is to educate the public, and not the Scout. Continuing, Dr. Strathie said, "More people are interested in Scouting in Bucks County. The financial campaign showed an increase of 251% in the number of contributors. The more advancement we have the better the Scouting, we will have, and the more people will become interested in our program for youth."

C. Wilson Roberts, Esq., vice-president, Southampton, while presenting the Star Scout badges assisted by neighborhood commissioner Lewis Fetherolf, Milford, made a noteworthy statement: "Bucks is proud of this organization, and the advancement made through the leaders. The eight years of leadership of past president Thomas B. Stockham, president Thomas B. Ross, Judge Keller and others has resulted in this splendid display of enthusiasm." Life Scout emblems were awarded by vice-president A. R. Hendricks, Sellersville, assisted by district commissioner Francis D. Heyder, Perkasie, with a number of quotations by Mr. Hendricks relative to health and the Life Scout badge, one of which, "One cannot defy the Law of Nature, watch your health, and carefully observe the part of your Scout Oath—physically strong."

Wimachtendienck, The Order of the Arrow from Buccoo Camps, composed of the honor campers attended the Court of Honor under Lodge Chief O. Kenneth Fretz, as a group. The Lodge entered the Court Room to the beat of the tom-tom by the medicine man (Star Scout Lawrence McCoy, Bristol No. 2). Eagle Scout Carl Leidy, Doylestown, chief of the tribe, gave the Indian ceremony from Mother Earth to the Sky and the Four Winds. The lodge members sang the lodge song, and took seats on the floor just before the Court began.

Taps was blown by Bucks County championship bugler William M. Carlin, Jr., assistant Scoutmaster, Doylestown No. 1, and his nearest bugling competitor Eagle Scout Gerald Biehn, Quakertown No. 2, opened the Court with his call of Assembly.

Walter M. Carwithen, Jr., director of the service corps worked many hours in securing properties, and "cleaning up" after the Court of Honor. Junior assistant scoutmaster Carwithen was assisted by assistant scoutmaster Hilborn Darlington, Robert Conroy, Diliwyn Darlington, Arthur Gross, Harold Hamilton, Jack Moore, and William Satterthwaite of Doylestown No. 2.

Scout Executive William F. Livermore wished to thank all those who were so willing in their co-operation, that made possible such an outstanding Court. The Scout Headquarters thanks Groff & Carwithen Lumber Company for transportation assistance and Harvey Leatherman of the Court House for their many courtesies.

Second Class Awards were: Edward Day and Arthur Kerr of Sellersville No. 1; Wilbur Uile of Bristol No. 1; John Grass, R. Wm. G. McCahan, Sr., Langhorne, Dies In Phila.

LANGHORNE, Feb. 11.—Known to many residents of Bucks County through his work as former Bucks county superintendent of highways, county prosecutor continued. "How Betty Gow told you how, when she reached into the crib, the baby was gone," you remember how she told you Colonel Lindbergh cried out, "Anne, they've stolen our baby!"

The women members of the jury had their eyes glued on the young prosecutor.

Hauck pointed out the defense had not even challenged the identity of the baby's body found May 22nd about two miles from the Lindbergh home. He challenged the defense to show a single point in the Attorney General's opening address, that the State has not proved. Hauck said, "We have shown you the infant Lindbergh was forcibly taken from its bed. It must have been pulled from that crib because the impression of his little body was still in the bed clothing. Outside, under the northeast window of the nursery, was found the very ladder you see in this Court room. It was broken. The prints where it rested in the ground showed there in the mud."

HULMEVILLE

A visit in Montclair, N. J., was participated in over the week-end by the Misses Grace H. Illick and Adeline E. Rectz.

Saturday visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Haefner were the Rev. and Mrs. Walter H. Canon and son, Harry, Philadelphia.

The Hulmeville public school string orchestra played at the Newportville Chapel, Saturday evening, giving several numbers on the program of entertainment.

Plans are being made by Neshamony Lodge, 422, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, for its 84th anniversary on Friday evening, February 22nd. Musical numbers and addresses will feature.

formerly of Edgely. They were attired in gowns the shade of ashes of roses. Their crepe turbans with veils matched the dresses, and they wore silver slippers. The Misses Barkley carried arm sprays of vari-colored sweet peas and snap-dragons.

Serving Mr. Winch as best man was Walter Bowker, Germantown, and the ushers were George Voss and Coursen Forrester, Natick, N. J.

A reception followed in the church hall and a luncheon was served to approximately 100 guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Winch left Saturday evening for a honeymoon trip. They will reside in an apartment at 200 Mill street. The bride travelled in an ensemble of brown.

Mrs. Winch graduated from Bristol high school in 1931. She has been employed in the office of Joseph Spencer & Sons for the past three years.

Mr. Winch has resided in Fergusonville for the past two years.

The Langhorne resident was affiliated with Philadelphia Lodge 543, F. and A. M., Bristol Lodge of Elks, No. 979, the Commandery of Doylestown, the Moose order at Doylestown, the Albert R. Atkinson Post, 210, American Legion, of Doylestown. He was also identified with the Bucks County Country Club, here.

The late Mr. McCahan was former superintendent of highways in this county; and was employed recently as sales engineer for the Koppers Products Company, Pittsburgh.

The Bristol Lodge of Elks will conduct a service at the R. L. Horner funeral home, 378 S. Bellevue avenue, here, tomorrow evening. Funeral service on Wednesday at two p. m., will be in charge of the Rev. Charles F. Freeman, pastor of the Salem Reformed Church, of Doylestown. Burial will be made in Cedar Hill Cemetery. Friends may call Tuesday evening.

HE WILL TRY A COMEBACK NEXT SEASON...

CHARLEY WAS SHOT IN THE LEG IN A HUNTING ACCIDENT 2 YEARS AGO. HE HAS BEEN WORKING OUT IN A GYM TO STRENGTHEN HIS LEG AND SAYS HE IS NOW AS GOOD AS EVER.

Baseball addicts all over the land will join with St. Louis rooters in hoping that the ill-fated Charley Gilbert makes a successful comeback next season.

Charley, it will be recalled, was the Cardinals' regular shortstop and one of the best in the game until he was accidentally shot in the leg while on a hunting trip a couple of years ago.

The discharge of the gun tore a gaping wound in the calf of his leg, and for a time it was thought that he might never regain the full use of the injured limb. For many months he lay in a hospital bed, then finally the wound healed enough to enable him to get around with the aid of crutches.

When he at last recovered the use of the shattered leg, Gilbert found that it was still too weak to stand up under the strain of violent athletic activity.

The courageous and determined Charley was not discouraged by disheartening setbacks in his endeavor to beat his way back to his old shortstop post, and so he started a systematic program of exercises to strengthen the weak limb.

Last year Gilbert worked out several times with the Cardinals during infield practice, and he was much encouraged over the greatly improved strength of the wounded leg.

It was apparent that his underpinning was not yet ready for the gruelling strain of big league infield play, so he has continued his careful regime of gymnasium workouts all this winter. Now he has complete confidence in his ability to make good at the old shortstop post next April.

Gilbert received a full player's share from the Cardinals' world series winnings last fall, though he hasn't been active since 1933, and Charley is tremendously grateful to his old team-mates for this fine act of generosity.
